Dr. Schnall,

I am a Masters student of psychology at Montclair State University in New Jersey. My area of interest is moral psychology/social cognition, and I am interested in performing a replication plus extension of your findings from Experiment 4 in Schnall, Haidt, Clore, and Jordan (2008). Could you send me the materials you used for this particular study (such as the time markers for the movie clips, the moral vignettes, and anything else of particular importance)? I have CC'd my research mentors above.

Thank you,
Nathan Kemper

Dear Nathan,

I recently described a replication experience where I did everything to help the replication authors and in turn had my research defamed and ridiculed:

<http://www.spspblog.org/simone-schnall-on-her-experience-with-a-registered-replication-project/>

There now is an acknowledged culture of "replication bullying" and indeed your supervisor Etienne LeBel has already publicly denounced my research (see attached).

Under these circumstances I am unable to cooperate with your request.

There is an large literature on morality and disgust. If you wish to make a contribution I would encourage you to consult the following review paper that describes the extensive body of research that is consistent with my 2008 paper:

Chapman, H.A. & Anderson, A.K. (2013). Things rank and gross in nature: A review and synthesis of moral disgust. Psychological Bulletin, 139, 300-327.

Best wishes,

Simone
